Art Dedication and Auction
to benefit

When: Friday, Oct. 17, 2014, at 6 p.m.
Where: McKittrick, Mo.

The Katy Land Trust will dedicate the artwork of Billyo O'Donnell on the historic Katy Trail landmark tower in McKittrick, Mo., followed by a reception and art auction to benefit Missouri River Relief. Festivities will begin at 6 p.m. Oct. 17 at the Katy Trail kiosk, McKittrick, MO., (see directions, below).

The art of many notable mid-Missouri artists will be featured, including:

Joey Los, a "magician" who works with hot molten metal, electricity and fire to create one-of-a-kind sculptures. Joey loves a challenge, such as "creating beautiful sculptures from metal pounded and pummeled by our beloved Missouri River until being fished out and delivered to my shop to be refurbished and made into something beautiful."

Billyo O'Donnell, recognized as one of America's leading plein aire landscape painters. Billyo is a Missourian -- born and raised approximately 70 miles west of St. Louis near the Missouri River. Consequently, his boyhood was spent living a "Huck Finn" kind of life roaming the forests and streams, fishing, hunting, and creating art.

Adam Long, a professional sculptor in St. Charles, Missouri. Educated in the St. Louis region, he has a BA in art education from Maryville University, an MA in studio art from Fontbonne University and an MFA in sculpture from Fontbonne University. He has been an Art Educator for 15 years working in public middle and high schools and the university level.

Bryan Haynes, nationally known painter and illustrator. Bryan's clients include Disney, Warner Brothers, Universal Studios, IBM, Nike, Sony, Anheuser-Busch and others. The Society of Illustrators, Print Magazine, Graphis-Switzerland and other prestigious organizations have honored Bryan with awards. He is also the author and illustrator of New Regionalism, the Art of Bryan Haynes.
